

ABSTRACT

This invention relates to methods and compositions for preventing and treating skin rash, such as perineal dermatitis, associated with enzymatic dermatitis. More particularly, this invention relates to compounds containing procyanidins, which possess trypsin and/or chymotrypsin inhibitory activity and are suitable for use in compositions for preventing and treating skin irritation caused by protease exposure, such as perineal dermatitis.

5